

with it, and, as far as I am aware, knew nothing whatever about it. "Through this unhappy affair, I have been an unwilling witness—in its consequences, somewhat of an innocent bystander—having been up to the hour of the Harvey incident a sincere believer in Governor Wilson. He is a man of ability. In some ways he might prove a candidate of availability, but I fear that if he became our President we might discover all too late that he possesses peculiarities which would prove disastrous. We want in the White House a man of broad mind, a well-balanced intellect, of hearty and kind, no less than daring. "I remain, with great respect, "Your obedient servant, "HENRY WATERSON." "Hon. B. R. Tillman."

Wilson Says It's False.
New York, January 26.—Governor Woodrow Wilson, on his departure for Boston on the midnight express to-night, made the following statement in reference to the Waterston-Tillman correspondence given out in Washington: "So far as I am concerned, the statement that Governor Wilson was requested to assist in raising money in any behalf is absolutely without foundation. Neither I nor any one authorized to represent me ever made any such request of him."

May Say Something To-Day.
New York, January 26.—Walter E. McCombs, campaign manager for Governor Wilson, after reading the Waterston-Tillman correspondence, to-night, said: "I have no comment to make to-night, but I shall make a statement on the subject to-morrow."

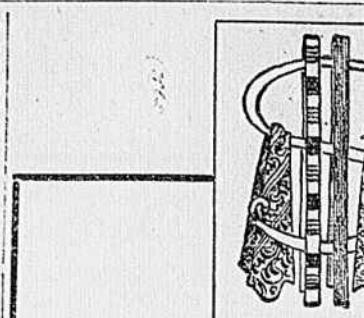

LEAGUE DISPUTE STILL UNSETTLED

Without desiring to assume the editorial prerogative, it is noted that the Virginia League is about ready for the funeral rites. Both sides are obstinate and will not budge an inch. Each considers its side right. There is no hope of a reconciliation. The contention of both sides seems to be, "Let the league go to smash; we are fighting for a principle."

Dirge forebodings of more war to come followed the adjournment. Threats and counter-threats surcharged the air. Each faction pointed out the salient features of its cause. Through it all sat Dr. Carson, the man of iron, immovable and impassive. He listened to the woes and trials and tribulations of the magnates. No expression of opinion could be obtained from him. He was a reincarnated Sphinx.

"I am going to make my report," he said. "Naturally I can't say what that report will be." Still, among the outsiders who watched the whole proceedings and noted how carefully and recklessly the Virginia League was wrecking itself against the reefs of petty jealousies and disagreements, the opinion prevailed that Dr. Carson learned toward the anti-Williams side of the argument.

Up to National Board.
Of course, this squabble is not done by any means. The board will have to hear all of the details. Then after the board has rendered its decision, the national commission will be asked to make a ruling. The question of property rights formed no an insuperable part of the argument. How could the national board or the national anything, asked the delegates, decide which side of the league was right. That really was the gravamen of the situation. And it is going to be pretty tight to the end. Each side has its paramount issues and each side is more or less right. Andrew Carnegie, with his peace wand could do a world of good right now in the Virginia League, only he doesn't know it, and he wouldn't have to give a medal either. Instead a medal would be better either him, or any other man who could find a solution of the difficulties into which the league has fallen.

At the meeting were Dennis Perkins and J. W. Seward, representing Petersburg; Elmore Helms, Roanoke; R. B. Wilkins, Lynchburg; O. E. Roach, Danville; Dr. R. B. McClary and Charlie Shaffer, Norfolk; and W. B. Bradley and W. H. Sands, Richmond.

It was not a pleasant meeting. There were many things said which might have been just as well unsaid. The board did not settle the dispute, it is as much a dispute now as it has ever been. The meeting adjourned sine die, and when another meeting will be called is just as legitimate cause for conjecture as is the future of the Virginia League. These Virginia League magnates love to quarrel with a love so surpassing that other with a dagger in one hand and an axe in the other. Even their conversation savors of paprika.

Charges to be brought against Williams may die a-borning. To-night it is the general topic of conversation. To-morrow another move may be determined upon. Both sides have counsel and counsel for both sides are busy preparing briefs. No preparations have been made for the playing season. Ball players are at a discount. The funeral will be held, it is claimed to have been fought. Obviously some one is due a disappointment. The whole question hinges upon the constitutionality of the constitution of the Virginia League. If the constitution holds, Williams is the president; if it does not, then a president is to be elected. Either way the league suffers.

Caucuses held early in the day by both sides presaged what was going to happen. Dr. Carson kindly consented to attend each caucus. He listened to both sides, and then refused to say anything. In the meeting he spoke his little part, but he sat down. Mum was the word after that. So the Virginia League, on a greased decline is uncompensating 'tis down downfall and making the way easy for those who may desire to take advantage of its troubles. In the future the dim and distant future—the settlement may come. Maybe it will be too late then.

Bankers to Meet Wishes of Southern Cotton Shippers.
New York, January 26.—Willingness on the part of foreign bankers and cotton buyers to modify the plan for safeguarding export cotton bills of lading to meet objections of the Southern cotton shippers is expressed in a statement given out to-night by H. Kern, chairman of the Liverpool cotton exchange and of the London committee. Mr. Kern and J. H. Simpson, representing the European bankers, recently returned from a conference on the subject with representatives of the Southern cotton shippers.

"We have agreed to place before the American bankers, European bankers, cotton exchanges and the American railways, the modifications that were then suggested," said Mr. Kern, "and the plan before it be made to modify with 95 tying with George L. Lyon, a professional."

TAFT IS LEAVING FOR ANOTHER TRIP

Will Go to New York, Then Look Over Situation in Ohio.

FRAUGHT WITH INTEREST

It Will Be First Visit to Home State Since Fall Elections.

Washington, January 26.—President Taft will leave Washington to-morrow on a five-day trip that will take him to New York and to Cleveland, Columbus and Akron, O., the most important journey in the eyes of many of his friends that he has planned since he got back to the White House from the West. To-night the President still was suffering from a cold that he contracted early in the winter, but it was said he was not serious enough to make him break engagements made many weeks ago.

In New York the President will be the guest overnight of his brother, Henry W. Taft, and will attend three dinners and one ball, but his political advisers are less interested in this part of the trip than they are in his first visit to Ohio since the Cincinnati elections last November.

Mr. Taft will spend three days in his home State; make more than a dozen speeches, and see many of the political leaders. He will not talk about any of his political opponents, it was said to-night, but may review the achievements of his administration.

The President is scheduled to reach New York about 5 o'clock to-morrow night. He will attend the annual banquet of the Ohio Society and "look in" on those of the West Virginia Society and the Aero Club of America, and will then visit the annual ball at the home of the Daughters of Jacob of New York City.

Leaving New York Sunday night—and he has no scheduled engagements for Sunday—the President will reach Cleveland Monday.

DUKE AND HIS PARTY ARE OFF FOR OTTAWA

Delighted With Reception in United States and Will Look Forward to Pleasure of Another Visit.

New York, January 26.—As he boarded his private car at the Grand Central Station to-night to return to Ottawa, after two days' entertainment in the United States, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, and uncle of King George V., turned to Ambassador Reid, who has been his host here, and said:

"We were very much impressed by the hospitality of your people. We were treated royally by the press and public. The duchess and myself are very grateful to the people of New York, and we shall look forward with great pleasure to another visit. Our visit this time seems to have been too short."

The duke's party, including the duchess and the Princess Patricia, Lieutenant-Colonel Lowther, Captain Rivers Bullock, Miss Folley, lady-in-waiting, and eight servants, arrived at the train gates fifteen minutes before schedule time and before the police detail to guard their departure had arrived.

A large crowd had gathered near the train, but it was altogether respectful, and the station guards had little difficulty in controlling it.

Repeated cheers were given to the royal visitors, and the duke each time raised his hat in acknowledgment. Just as the train whistled for departure, the duchess and her daughter, the Princess Patricia, each embraced Mrs. Reid, and all the members of the party waved their hands as the train drew them out of the terminal at 7:40 P. M.

On his way to the McKinley day banquet of the Tippecanoe Club, which will be the principal speaker, the President will visit the students of the Cleveland law school, and after the dinner will look in on that of the Hungarian citizens.

His first engagement in Columbus Tuesday will be a reception at a leading hotel. His program there includes luncheon with the Chamber of Commerce, dedication of the new Federal building and the McKinley day banquet of the Columbus Glee Club. He will spend the night in Columbus, and Wednesday morning will meet the Republican editors, and after visiting the constitutional convention will leave about noon for Akron. In Akron he will attend the banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, and leave for Washington shortly before midnight.

of more than a hundred neighbors, the sorrowing parents and brothers, the funeral services for Miss Eva Chambers, who was murdered Wednesday morning near her school in the Cave Spring section by Joshua Lee, were conducted in the home of her father, S. A. Chambers, near Garra's Mill, by the Rev. F. D. Hammond, pastor of the Cave Spring Methodist Church, this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The widespread popularity of the slain woman was attested by the large crowd which attended the funeral. Many school-children and scores of the patrons of the school were among those who gathered. Following the services the body was taken to the family burial plot near the home, where the burial services were conducted.

Miss Ruth Turner, assistant teacher at the school over which Miss Chambers presided, and who was an eyewitness to the tragedy, has not recovered from the shock, and her condition was such this morning that a physician was summoned to attend her. She never has been able to give a detailed account of the shooting owing to her condition.

Remarkable Christmas Present

Among the curious Christmas presents of this year will be one for a man and date of paper clipped from, this information has been put in with a book typewriter. The words thus inscribed amount to 152,262.

In actual times a very strict record of which has been kept the work required sixty-four working days throughout the year, and has kept in the hands of a few people, as readers, clippers, mounters and binders. Every newspaper of importance is represented. This is merely a specimen of none of the unique orders which get into the Burrelle Bureau, for the extent to which clippings are used by individuals and by business concerns seems to be remarkable.

There are many people in private as well as in public who would need press clippings and don't know it. It might be well for them to look up this man Burrelle, who is said to be so well known that a letter from him will reach "Burrelle, New York," will reach him with no delay.
